

Privacy Policy

Access Macquarie Limited ("Access MQ") recognises that users may have concerns about the privacy and confidentiality of their personal information when using our website. The following is intended to inform the user about the type of information accessed and/or retained by Access MQ and the handling of that information.

Users may be asked to provide details such as name, mailing address, name of organisation, job title, telephone and facsimile numbers, and e-mail addresses, etc. if they wish to access the online forms. This information is stored in secure databases which can only be accessed by Access MQ employees. We will not at any time share, sell or licence this information to any other company or organisation, unless we are required to do so by law or to enforce the terms of agreements with our clients, or unless you have given your explicit consent. The personal information will only be used to send communications which may be of interest to the user. No other information about the user is collected by Access MQ.

If you have any concerns about the privacy of your information or wish to modify or request the deletion of your details, please direct your query to:
